FAQs

- Do I need a degree to get a job in cyber?
 - NO! Colleges are zeros. As someone with a Master's degree in cybersecurity and a bachelor's in math, you can rest assured that a degree will do next to nothing for you in this industry. As a father to two young boys, if their goals are to get into tech, they will not be attending university, but they will attend something like this cyber bootcamp.
- I don't have any technical experience. Can I still get a cybersecurity job?
 - YES! This is the ZERO to Hoodie bootcamp, not the technical experience to Hoodie bootcamp. Will it be harder without any technical experience? Yes. Have many of my students made it in this industry without any prior experience? Also yes. It depends on your work ethic, not your experience.
- How do I know it's for me?
 - You don't. You try it and find out. The only difference is, you'll find out after months, not years like you would if you went to university. I'd recommend looking up some hacking tutorials and start studying for your A+ if you're completely green, or studying for your Net+ if you have any technical experience at all. You'll know pretty quickly if this life is for you or not.

FAQs

- I'm only interested in the money and the lifestyle. I don't really care about cybersecurity as a career. Can I still be successful?
 - Probably not. This is a detail-oriented industry and small details missed can result in entire companies going under. Chances are you won't last in this industry if you don't at least enjoy it or respect the work that you're doing and the importance it holds.
- I come from X industry. Can I transition to cybersecurity?
 - YES! See question 2. If you can come from no technical experience, you can come from any other industry too.
- I'm outside of the US. Is this bootcamp for me?
 - YES! The foundation of this bootcamp is internationally recognized certifications and additional supplemental information. Will this mean you're guaranteed a US based job? No. Will it give you a opportunity to pursue a cyber career in your home country? Likely. Is it possible that you could get a job with a western company being a citizen of your current country? Absolutely. Being a US resident is a huge advantage but it's possible without being one to still secure a job.

FAQs

- I don't know anything about X subject. Is this bootcamp for me?
 - YES. Everything we introduce, we introduce from zero. But the material builds and assumes you learned what you were supposed to. Keep up and everything will make sense from Linux to Python to Hacking.
- I'm interested in enrolling my child in high school. Is this a good program for them?
 - YES!!!! Nothing makes me happier than seeing young people succeed and put themselves on a good path early on. We have students in the substack right now who are 17 and their life trajectories are tremendous. I'd love to see that for your child as well.
